

PRES. ROOSEVELT SEEKS TO AVERT FRENCH SUSPICION; NEED ACCORD

Cooperation Sought As Anglo-American Agreement is Seen
DEBT IS BROACHED
Today's Program Includes
Much Activity

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Having laid a foundation for Anglo-American accord at the forthcoming world economic conference, President Roosevelt turned today to the more difficult phase of his international undertaking—that of allaying French suspicions and persuading them to go along in a spirit of cooperation.

No hard-and-fast agreements were reached between the President and Prime Minister MacDonald, but both expressed their "deep satisfaction" over the results of their discussions touching on world price levels, central bank policies, monetary standards, exchange restrictions, improvement of the status of silver and other subjects relating to world trade.

FRANCE IS NEEDED
Definite agreements were left for the world conference itself, for both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. MacDonald recognized that if their ideas are to be translated into action the cooperation of other nations—notably France—must be obtained.

Consequently, with the Anglo-American discussions virtually concluded, President Roosevelt lost no time in turning to M. Herriot, the French envoy. He was at the White House until midnight, getting from Mr. Roosevelt at first hand the conclusions arrived at in principle with Mr. MacDonald.

Upon leaving, M. Herriot told inquirers:

"The President laid before me a complete and precise program, including everything—armaments, debts, gold, everything. I am well pleased with the beginning of our conversations."

M. Herriot declined, of course, to elaborate upon his statement. But it was noted significantly that the thorny problems of the debts was publicly mentioned for the first time. The joint Roosevelt-MacDonald communique last night omitted any reference to them.

Apparently, Mr. Roosevelt has succeeded in convincing his foreign visitors that the debts, as such, constitute but a relatively small part of the general economic picture, and that once the troublesome problems of currency stabilization, trade restrictions and tariffs are disposed of the debts will take care of themselves.

DISCOUNTS MADE
With the dollar nose-diving in the world's exchanges, it was pointed out the debtors can now make their June payments at a discount of some 15 percent, and a considerable part of it can be paid in silver, at that, under legislation pending and certain to pass in Congress.

Officials of all governments were eloquently silent about whether the June 15 payments will be continued on Page Two

"HOUDINI OF CELLS" ESCAPES, IS CAUGHT

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., April 25.—Leland Harvey, notorious "Houdini" of Georgia jails, escaped for his fifteenth time from the state prison early today, but his bid for freedom, as usual, was brief.

After sawing his way out of the death cell, Harvey stripped three sleeping deputies sheriff of their pistols and keys, commandeered their automobile and fled, but was recaptured near Macon, 30 miles from the prison.

WASHINGTON C. H. "SAFER" IS OUSTED

WASHINGTON C. H., April 25.—Safety Service Director Paul Carman was formally asked to resign here today by Mayor G. H. Worrell, who gave no reason for the action.

In a letter to the Safety Director, Mayor Worrell asked that the present incumbent in the office resign his post and that the resignation become effective at midnight April 30.

At the same time that the action asking resignation of Carman was made known announcement was made that the new safety chief would be Oscar A. Wilke, Union-twp trustee, now employed at a local clothing establishment.

Commissioners Re-Fill Office Of Dog Warden

Desmer Spangler, of Ashville, Hired at Salary of $100 Per Month; Office Had Been "Emptied" In Economy's Sake First of Year.

Pickaway - co commissioners, Tuesday, had announced the employment of Desmer Spangler, Harrison-co constable, as county dog warden. This office had been declared vacant shortly after January 1.

Spangler was hired on the basis of $100 a month to work whenever the commissioners demand it necessary. He is now hired for one month's time. At the end of that time if he is needed he will be instructed to continue the work, if not he will be subject to call.

The position when declared vacant was held by J. W. Chalfin, Pickaway-twp. Mr. Chalfin was paid $6 a day for each day that he worked.

The office was not completely abolished by the commissioners' action, making employment of a dog warden optional to them at any time they saw fit.

A number of persons have made protests recently because of a number of dogs allegedly running over the county.

Mr. Chalfin's office was declared vacant in the interests of economy, the commissioners declared.

'PAYLESS' TEACHERS 'BOO' GOV. HORNER

Business at Three Chicago Banks Halts Amid Demonstration.

MONEY IS DEMANDED
Traylor Declares Taxes Must Be Paid.

CHICAGO, April 25.—In the wake of mass demonstrations by payless school teachers Gov. Henry Horner and Mayor E. J. Kelly today submitted to state legislative leaders their program for the financial salvation of Chicago's government.

Accompanying their plan to force immediate tax collection was a warning from Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, that "unless people pay their taxes this government is going to break down."

Three bills will be urged upon the Illinois legislature for immediate passage. The measures, aimed at forcing payment of back taxes totalling $250,000,000, were agreed upon at a conference of legislators, bankers and state, county and city officials late yesterday in the office of Mayor Kelly while 500 demonstrating teachers booed and shouted in the corridor.

HORNER SILENCED
Gov. Horner attempted to address the legislature today.

Vaskos Consent To Operation
HASTINGS-ON-HUDSON, N. Y., April 25.—Baby Helen Vasko will be given her chance to live.

After weeks of uncertainty, during which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Vasko, stood out uncompromisingly against all medical advice to have an operation performed on little Helen's left eye which is affected by a cancerous tumor, the child finally was surrendered to the custody of the Westchester-co children's court last night as the first step toward having the operation performed.

In doing so Mrs. Anna Vasko, the mother, finally receded from her grim doctrine "better death than blindness." But this was only after the Brooklyn appellate court had handed down a decision declaring the courts of the state have ample authority to order a surgical operation upon a child, against the wishes of the parents, when it appears that the child's life or welfare is jeopardized.

Ever since when had examined baby Helen had declared that unless the infected eye is removed she will surely die.

BURKE WANTS NAME OFF M'LEAN OUSTER

WASHINGTON C. H., April 25.—Monday afternoon witnessed another back-up in the Norman McLean ouster case as P. J. Burke, another signer of the petition requesting McLean's removal from office of prosecuting attorney, asked that his name be stricken from the petition.

Burke's request came after A. L. McDonald, local coal dealer, had made a similar request of Common Pleas Judge H. M. Rankin.

PHOENIX, Ariz., April 25.—After a restful night, Winnie Ruth Judd, "double trunk murderer," appeared pleased today with her tiny white room in Ward D of the state insane asylum.

Mrs. Judd was brought here yesterday from the state prison at Florence, where a jury, by finding her insane, saved her from being hanged next Friday for the murder of Agnes Anne Leroy whose body, together with that of Hedvig Samuelson, was dismembered and shipped in a trunk from Phoenix to Los Angeles.

Dr. E. D. Berends, superintendent of the hospital, said Mrs. Judd would be kept under strict observation at least a month.

Her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, and her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd, are the only persons who will be allowed to visit her.

The Boy Scout Fund (An Editorial)

THE drive for funds to carry on with the Boy Scout movement in Circleville and Pickaway Co is on.

This campaign needs the moral and financial support of every citizen. It is a worthy cause.

No time in the history of our country have we needed organizations such as the Boy Scouts to safeguard the interests of our youth as at the present time. In the youth of today lies the hope of the future.

The funds collected will be spent wisely and for the best interests of the youth under the supervision of the Executive Board of the Area Council. The amount required will enable the Council to meet in a fairly adequate way the problems of the present day.

The men who are assisting in this good work are to be commended. They are doing the work because they know it is worth while. When you are solicited, meet these men cordially and give all that you can. Every dollar you donate will be spent to make better boys and give them better training so that they will be better men.

It is your duty to answer the call of the future citizens.

DO NOT FAIL THEM!

FATE OF O. N. G. IN BALANCE AS CUT IS HINTED

Local Members of Militia Watch Development With Interest

HENDERSON ACTS

Two Companies Here Prepare for Camping

A battle for continuation of the Ohio National Guard was to be made in Washington, D. C., Tuesday by Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, who left for the capital Monday night after declaring that abolition of the militia is threatened in proposed federal economies.

With two units of the National guard here this question is of much importance to Circleville. The motor transport company, commanded by Frank Littleton

70 HAVE APPLIED
Approximately 70 men have applied with Miss Gretchen Moeller, secretary of the Social Service Clearing House, for places in the Reforestation army being formed. No definite information concerning the Pickaway-co quota has been received here.

and Joe M. Lynch, has 50 men on its roster including men on a waiting list, and the medical detachment commanded by Drs. Lloyd Jones and C. C. Beale has 22 men on its roster.

WOULD CUT DRILLS
Henderson said he would enter an official protest against reported plans of the secretary of war to abolish the two weeks' training camp period and reduce armory drills from 48 to 24 a year.

"These economies," asserted Henderson, "will seriously cripple the guard if not eventually destroy it."

The federal assistance received by the Ohio National guard and other state militias is all that preserves these units of defense, according to the adjutant-general. Armory drill pay received by the 10,000 men in Ohio averages $4.50 a month. The training camp period each year is employed to keep the members in trim.

MILITIA IS NEEDED

PRES. ROOSEVELT IS FRIENDLY TO 30-HOUR-A-WEEK PLAN

—MRS. PERKINS AVERS

WASHINGTON, April 25.—President Roosevelt is friendly to the Black 30-hour week bill but it is not an administration measure, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins told the House labor committee today.

The question was asked by Rep. Elizey (D) of Mississippi, as Mrs. Frank D. Roosevelt, wife of the president, and Miss Isabel MacDonald, daughter of the British prime minister, listened.

"You will realize the importance of this question because of the situation in the House," said Elizey. "I understood you to say when you appeared in executive session that the president is friendly to this bill but it is not an administration measure."

"That is right," replied Miss Perkins.

WOULD INCLUDE ALL
She had no objection to a law putting everybody in the country on the six hour day and five day week.

Testifying on the Black bill, which passed the Senate, and her own proposed expansion, she characterized the bill as the "beginning of the end of child and old-age labor."

She intimated representatives of organized labor will come before the committee urging a universal 5-1-2 day week—for bank presidents as well as for factory workers.

"I have no objection to this except that it would greatly increase the difficulty of administration," the secretary added.

She opposed flexibility which would allow any industrial plant to work men or women "much more" than 40 hours a week for a 10-week period. The remainder of the time the plants would be on a 30-hour week basis.

MRS. OGLESBEE, 38, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Interment will be in Forest cemetery by D. E. Whitsel of Kingston.

Another daughter, Mrs. Simon Peters of Kingston, three sons, Frank J. of this city; Louis of Detroit, and Charles Kreiger of Grove City; two sisters, Mrs. Caroline Kuhn of Waverly and Mrs. Joseph Darlow of London, and two brothers, Jacob and Fred Simon of Chillicothe, survive.

FRANKLIN-CO TAX PAYERS DEMAND CUT

2,000 People Storm Court-house in Columbus on Tuesday Morning

WORLEY OPPOSES

20 Per Cent Wholesale Reduction Planned

COLUMBUS, April 25.—Demanding that the valuations on their real estate be reduced, a crowd of approximately 2,000 persons stormed the Franklin-co court house here today.

Announcement of Mayor Henry Worley that he would fight any tax slashes caused the number of taxpayers seeking reductions to be greatly increased. Worley's plan for a legal fight against an impending wholesale 20 per cent cut in real estate valuations by the board of revision struck a snag Monday night when city council failed to approve his effort.

COUNCIL SILENT
Council was non-committal when Worley asked them if they wished to instruct City Attorney John Davis to study the possibilities of a suit against the Board of Revision.

Worley may fight the reduction alone if council fails to back him. Council has called a meeting for Wednesday afternoon to consider the problem. The contemplated reduction would mean a slash of $400,000 in Columbus city revenue and $800,000 in Columbus school revenue this year, according to Worley's figures.

President of Council John M. Lewis is in favor of the 20 per cent reduction, he has declared.

PLANES BOMB U. S. MISSION

Fate of Mission Innates Unknown As Japanese Planes Do Damage.

PEIPING, April 25.—Japanese military airplanes bombed the American Methodist mission at Shih-Hsia today as Japanese and Chinese forces in north China engaged in bitter hostilities.

Fate of the mission or its inmates could not immediately be learned. It is one of the oldest American missions in China.

The station was in charge of a native pastor during the bombing, which was described as unusually severe.

With the Japanese troops still pounding from the north, disaffected elements in the Peiping-Tientsin area continued efforts to overthrow the authority of the Nanking government here.

It was reported the rebel leaders were working in co-operation with Manchukuo agents, aided by the Japanese.

While the hostilities continued following gains made by the Chinese yesterday, Sir Miles Lampson, British minister, carried forward efforts to end the fighting, advancing proposals for creation of neutral zones.

The meet is a much-sought-after one with some of the classiest duck pin bowlers in the two states expected to make the trip here. An effort will be made to line up several local teams to take part in the tournament.

Packard spent much time and effort to obtain the tournament for his alleys.

TRACK MEN OF 3 SCHOOLS TO CONTEST HERE

Circleville Host To New Holland, Pickaway Harriers Thursday.

OPPOSITION TOUGH

Pete Davis, of New Holland, Must Be Watched.

Circleville high school's track and field team will be hard-pressed to retain its honors Thursday afternoon when a triangular meet is held on the high school lot. New Holland and Pickaway-twp will provide opposition—and plenty of it.

Last year the Tigers scored 74 points to 57 for New Holland and 16 for Pickaway. Carl Purcell and Ned Thacher, high scorers for Coach Herberholz' aggregation, are gone while the stars of the other schools are back in school.

DAVIS FEARED

Paul "Pete" Davis, New Holland's crack all-around athlete, is thought to be the man to be feared most. He does about everything.

Coach Herberholz' hope for victory is placed on the flying feet of Bill Heggle and Dean White. These two athletes scored plenty of points in the inter-school tournament a week ago.

Freddie Smith is also expected to grab off some points. In the meet a year ago Circleville and New Holland each obtained eight first places, Purcell taking three and Thacher two for the Tigers. Davis won three first places and a second to be high point man of the meet with 18 points.

An effort was made to have Jackson-twp join the meet but the date was not agreeable to Coach C. J. Lamp's athletes. The meet begins at 3 p. m.

TEACHERS

dress the demonstrators, but was heckled and booed into silence.

Banking leaders assured the officials that enough tax warrants can be sold to pay the teachers and other public employees the $60,000, 000 in back salaries due them when and if the banks and other investors are satisfied as to their security. This security, they said, depends on forcing payment of taxes.

Meanwhile the teachers were planning another demonstration for tomorrow to be held at the principal banks. Leaders instructed them "to bring lunches and camp stools."

Five thousand teachers, divided into groups and marched on the five principal downtown banks yesterday, halting business temporarily at three of the institutions and jamming the sidewalks in front of all of them.

"To hell with trouble makers!" was the explosive remark made by Charles Gates Dawes, chairman of the board of the City National bank, when a delegation of teachers heckled him in his office and demanded that the banks purchase tax anticipation warrants.

made, but the belief prevailed strongly that they will be—and that, in addition, France will "cure" her default of last December.

Hence, for the time being at least, it appeared the troublesome question of the debts is being kept in the background.

With regard to other matters, however, there are probably shoals ahead. M. Herriot is expected to raise the perennial question of French "security" which has wrecked many international conferences. To her demand for political and military security there is now added a new kind of security—financial.

The American dollar and the British sterling are both depreciated, leaving the French franc the only major currency still on a gold basis, and at the mercy of the cheaper dollar and pound in international commerce.

Today's program found the American and French experts meeting at the state department, and Mr. MacDonald and M. Herriot attending a luncheon conference with Secretary of State Hull.

Tenbitt, both the British prime minister and French envoy, will dine informally with President Roosevelt at the White House, later meeting the foreign affairs committees of Congress. Mr. MacDonald will leave tomorrow to sail for home, and simultaneously with his departure, Richard E. Bennett, the Canadian premier, moves to the White House for several days' stay, and to continue his conversations with the president concerning Canadian-American trade relations.

First Band Festival To Be Friday At Bexley Hi

Plans are about completed for the two festivals to be given this year by the Central Ohio High School Band Association.

This organization is made up of five High School bands: The Bexley Band under the leadership of Kent Morse; the Upper Arlington Band under the direction of Henrietta K. Davis; the Marysville Band with L. P. Reed in charge; the Circleville Band conducted by C. F. Zaenglein and the Lancaster Band with Kenneth Kuller directing.

The purpose of this association, which was begun last year are:

1. To promote an appreciation of the better music.
2. To give our boys and girls the experience of playing under the direction of some of the better known band conductors.
3. To provide an additional source of motivation for the members of these High School bands.
4. To assist in making for a friendly spirit between schools.

Two band festivals are held each year—one in a different town or city.

Last year, these festivals were held in Marysville and Bexley; this year, they are to be held in Circleville and Bexley. The first one will be given at Bexley on April 28th. There will be a parade in the afternoon and the concert in the evening will be at 8 o'clock in the Junior High school building on Cassingham-rd. It will be conducted by the widely-known composer, bandmaster and music publisher of Cincinnati, Ohio, Henry Fillmore, who also writes under the names, Al Hayes, Harold Bennett, Harry Hartley and Ray Hall.

As a composer and arranger, Mr. Fillmore ranks with the best—in fact, he is known as one of "The Ten March Kings of America." The trombone is the instrument on which he himself specializes and he has written some very interesting solos for this horn.

As a conductor, one needs only to be reminded of his band's popularity over the radio. This band is composed of some of the finest musicians in Cincinnati, and under the direction of Mr. Fillmore, it has become one of the best known bands in America.

The second concert will be held here on May 6.

The Civilizing Force

ACCORDING to one conception, the love of money is the root of all evil; according to another, it is one of the great principles that move the world. It is not denied that love of money leads to the commission of many crimes. On the other hand, what would be the material and moral state of the world were there no passion for wealth? We would have few of the comforts and conveniences that are now available to most of us. Most of the people were indifferent to money; did not care greatly for it or for the things that are to be had in exchange for it.

All the great discoveries in science and every one of the great inventions that have been made might have been brought forth if nobody cared for money. But they would not have been turned to account. Knowledge is useful only when employed to the general advantage. If there were no love of money there would be no capital to exploit the products of science and invention, nor would there be incentive to engage in the manufacture and distribution of the great mass of devices that have become necessities to us.

People would be born, struggle through a space of time to secure a bare living and die. They might or they might not be concerned about a future state. Whether or not they were, they would be as busy as we are finding the things that money can buy. And they would be as ruthless as we are in the pursuit of money. Primitive civilization was more brutal than ours is. In the process of refinement through which we have passed during the successive centuries man has demonstrated as criminal behavior that which could not be condemned in earlier times because it seemed to be necessary for individual preservation.

In the pursuit of money today there is a minimum of injustice. At any rate everybody gets a chance to secure a share of the general fund of wealth, usually enough for his needs and at the same time may enjoy the fruits of intelligence and industry. Moreover, everybody who works for money, everybody who works for money, makes a contribution to the common welfare. The love of wealth moves the world a great deal; it may be responsible for considerable evil. However, our progress has made it possible to supply most legitimate wants legitimately, hence there is less need to resort to devious ways to secure money.

Law For Automobileists

EFFECTUAL statutory regulations of motor vehicle traffic is admittedly a difficult problem. But as it engages the attention of lawmakers and the public in virtually all states it may be assumed that in time a satisfactory solution will be found. One recent suggestion is that the federal government take over the general control of automobile operation, paying to the several states their due proportion of fees collected based on the number of machines owned within their respective borders.

It is argued that touring and the recognition of the state's license by other states makes the automobile an interstate vehicle and that congress therefore reasonably may assume jurisdiction over them all. Whatever merit there may be in this, it is outweighed by other considerations. Further extension of federal jurisdiction over matters that are peculiarly within the police powers of the states is undesirable. But the most serious objection is that there is no ground for belief that congress is capable of making more satisfactory regulations for the country as a whole than the state can make each one for itself.

The law that will be truly protective must have for its object preventing unqualified persons from operating automobiles. It is impossible to draft such a measure.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE

by WARWICK DEEPING

SYNOPSIS

Dr. John Wolfe, old Dr. Montague Threadgold's assistant, is stunned at the unsanitary conditions he finds in the smug little town of Navestock. Wolfe realizes his greatest fight in ridding the town of pollution is in overcoming the resentful attitude of the people themselves who seem perfectly satisfied with their mode of living. He encounters his first obstacle in the person of Jasper Turrell, the brewer, who objects to Wolfe taking a sample of his well water for analysis. Undaunted by opposition, Wolfe continues his researches and prepares a map of the town's unsanitary areas. The one bright spot in Navestock is the home of Mrs. Mary Mascall where Wolfe is always sure of a welcome. When Mrs. Mascall is too ill to go to Fleming Court to pay her dues of three dozen eggs to the Lord of the Manor, Wolfe offers to accompany her young daughter, Jess. According to custom, the farm laborers gather around and ask a blessing on Jess as she appears with her tribute.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

They were old world phrases that had passed from generation to generation, and had been spoken by the forebears of the men gathered before Moor Farm. Wolfe stood and watched Jess Mascall as she came slowly down the path. The girl seemed to have grown taller and older of a sudden. She carried herself with a grace and simple stateliness, looking at each man in turn and saying: "Thank you, Joe—thank you, Barnaby." She passed under the cypresses, and her eyes met Wolfe's. He was standing bareheaded, a man touched and charmed by many suggestive memories. He bowed to Jess, and she gave him a grave curtsy, holding her head high, and looking him in the eyes. The moon was ten days old, and the night clear and fine, and as the Moor Farm company crossed the moor, Wolfe, who was riding beside the gig, saw many other lanterns moving in the distance. They glimmered here and there, faint points of yellow light coming and going like the lights of boats on a rolling sea. Fleming's Cross lay westwards of Beacon Hill on a low ridge where the old coach road topped the moor. An ancient inn stood on the hill-top, with its sign of "The Rising Sun" swinging on a post before the door. It was in a little paddock behind the inn that the Lord of the Manor's Whispering Court was held.

The lanterns came jogging over the moor, some of them following more sheep-tracks, others moving along the roads. As they neared Fleming's Cross the Navestock road began to fill with silent, shadowy, striding figures, all moving towards the hill-top. The lanterns that were carried gave rise to curious illusions. In a dark cutting under the shade of a clump of fir Wolfe saw a pair of white-gaitered legs moving as though they had no body belonging to them. Nothing but the white legs and the lantern were visible, and the effect was so quaint that Wolfe pointed it out to Jess.

"Look there, somebody's legs have walked off on their own—and left the rest behind."

She laughed.

"Aren't they just swell? They'll get lonely presently, wandering about all by themselves."

A man on a big grey horse blundered out from somewhere, and nearly rode Wolfe down. The surgeon drew closer to the gig.

"Hallo, sir, look out—"

The gig lamps gave him a momentary glimpse of a powerfully built young man, in smartly cut clothes, who glared at Wolfe as though he had no intention of apologizing for having nearly ridden over his hat. The young man took off his hat to Jess, but she did not seem to notice him. They left him behind them somewhere in the darkness.

"You didn't see your friend?"

"Oh, yes, I did."

"Hector Turrell. He's a beast, I don't like him."

"Turrell the brewer's son?"

"Yes. He's always riding along the road when I come back from Miss Plimley's at Navestock. He's an awful bully; always knocking someone about."

"That's rather a dangerous game."

"People are afraid of him, or of his father, I suppose. What do you say, Joe?" This to the driver at her side.

Joe Munday was terse and laconic.

"The chap learned of a swell prize fighter in Lunnun, so I've heard tell. Besides—he's Turrell's son. Tain't worth no chap's while to get old Turrell's spite on him."

And Wolfe supposed not.

The Lord of the Manor's Court at Fleming's Cross proved to be a quaint affair, picturesquely staged. Lawyer Fyson, the steward, stood by the white post in the paddock, a brazier full of burning coal beside him, and a staff of office in his hand. Behind him were ranged his bellman, stave bearers, and foresters, while the tenants of the Court gathered in dead silence about the white post, their heads uncovered; their lanterns glimmering in a great circle. The only bold and blatant voice was the voice of the big hand-bell. The steward read the roll in a whisper, his officers proclaimed in whispers, the court-tenants swore to their pledges in whispers.

When Jess Mascall carried her basket of eggs towards the white post and the red brazier, Wolfe followed her, and thrust the certificate he had written into old Fyson's hand. The bell gave three sharp clangs, and Wolfe found himself taken by the shoulders and marched back over a furrow cut in the turf. The ground about the white post appeared to be privileged ground, sacred to the feet of those who were tenants of the Court. In the old days Wolfe would have been whipped with furze branches over the moor, instead of being marched gravely beyond the formal furrow.

He laughed good-humouredly, and turning to where the Moor Farm labourers were grouped with their lanterns, mounted his nag and watched the procedure of the Court.

The whispering voices, the queer solemnity, the glimmering lanterns were part of the mystery of Turling Moor. It was when Jess had played her part, and was being escorted back by the two staff-bearers towards her supporters and her gig, that Wolfe again caught sight of Mr. Hector Turrell. He saw the man moving his horse around the circle of figures as though to meet Jess as she came through the crowd.

It was something more than an impulse that made Wolfe forestall Hector Turrell. If he had made an enemy of the father, his enmity might just as well include the son. Jess went to the gig with her hand resting on John Wolfe's arm.

At the Moor Farm gate she would have had him come in, and join the farm hands at the state supper in the kitchen.

"Just for half an hour."

"I may be wanted down at Navestock. I have let Dr. Threadgold in for the surgery work, as it is."

"It won't hurt him."

"No, I must go—Jess."

She gave him a quick look and said no more, but she watched him ride across the paddock.

Wolfe felt that the black mass of Turling Moor was behind him, and he saw the lights of Navestock shining in the valley. These lights had a quick and powerful effect upon him, blinking their message up out of the darkness, and recalling grimmer moments of responsibility and effort. For so many hours Wolfe had been a great, playful child, half-boy, half-man. Jess had called to him with the voice of her youth. Her infinite freshness and her laughter had made him laugh with her, and forget. He had felt the sunlight upon the open moor, and those queer moments of solemnity that had turned the eyes of a child into the eyes of a woman.

Both Dr. Threadgold and his wife were out when Miss Priscilla Perfrement's maid rang the bell at Prospect House. John Wolfe was in the surgery, and he was called upon to speak with Miss Perfrement's maid, a lean woman with hangdog eyebrows and a negligible bust.

"Dr. Threadgold must come at once."

"Dr. Threadgold is out."

"Then he must be sent for."

"Dr. Threadgold is out on a country round. He will not be back till dinner-time."

The maid looked Wolfe over, summed him up after her fashion, and decided that he was not a raw boy.

"You're the assistant?"

"I am."

"Miss Perfrement has one of her heart attacks."

"I'll come at once."

Miss Priscilla Perfrement lived in a narrow, red-brick house that was squeezed between two of the stouter mansions on Mulberry Green. No made thing intruded here. The neat, drugged hall had no hat-stand, no cupboard as the pit of a man's untidiness, no weather glass to be rapped and abused. The lamp was held by a nymph in plaster set tripping upon a pedestal of imitation marble. But the nymph had been defrauded of her nakedness. She wore a sort of white night-dress that was changed monthly and sent to the wash.

"Doctor, dear doctor, I'm dying!"

Where Death had stationed himself in the neat, stuffy, over-furnished room, was a matter of speculation. Wolfe saw a yellow-faced little woman in black-alpaca, with grey side-curls and a twittering face, propped against cushions in a plush-covered arm-chair. The heels of her shoes beat the carpet under the edge of her crinoline, and the crinoline itself had cocked itself forward with unseemly arrogance giving glimpses of convulsed white-stockinged legs.

"Dr. Threadgold is out, miss."

"Oh, oh!"

"I've brought the assistant."

Miss Perfrement jumped, and gave Wolfe a shocked stare. Her limbs twitched like the limbs of a choreic child.

"Oh dear, oh dear! Eliza, I'm dying!"

Wolfe looked at her very gravely, and understood with what sort of sentimental sick ness he had to do. Here was a good lady whose troubles had been so many pinfalls in the cloistered selfishness of her little life, and who had been compelled to draw attention to herself by means of childish screams and tantrums. When Miss Perfrement felt unimportant and neglected, she had a "heart attack," and her friends and neighbours would see Dr. Threadgold's brought am rattling over the cobbles. These hysterical outbursts were essays in dissipation, and methods of attracting sympathy and notice.

Aid in the Fight On Diphtheria

Have Child Immunized Against This Dread Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
 United States Senator from New York
 Former Commissioner of Health,
 New York City

OUR DISCOVERY of an anti-toxin for diphtheria and a similar treatment of scarlet fever have gone far towards lowering the death rate of diphtheria. No one will deny that with better care of measles, chicken pox and other diseases of childhood, the death rate has been greatly decreased. But now comes the uncomfortable statement that the number of deaths caused by diphtheria in certain localities has increased within the past year.

To what can we attribute this increase? It is because there has been a definite decrease in the number of children receiving the immunization treatment of diphtheria. This is indeed unfortunate, because diphtheria is a disease that can be prevented.

Every child should be given this protection. It is a simple procedure and administered without pain or discomfort. If every child would be immunized from diphtheria when he reached the age of nine months, diphtheria would soon become as rare a disease as smallpox.

I am confident that if an mothers realized the grave danger of diphtheria they would not hesitate to take immediate steps to protect their children. Of course the children are safe if they are not exposed to the germs of the disease. But when and how that exposure may take place is something we cannot foretell.

Diphtheria germs are present everywhere. They grow in contaminated milk. They are found on soiled cups, drinking fountains, pencils, pens, forks, spoons and other objects soiled by persons suffering from this disease.

Another danger that we must guard against is that of infection by the so-called diphtheria "carriers." Diphtheria carriers are persons who are perfectly well themselves, but harbor the diphtheria germs.

"From what I have said you will agree that it is practically impossible to guard your child from the germs of diphtheria. Unfortunately, it is impossible to determine accurately when these germs are present. But the child can be protected by diphtheria inoculations. It confers "immunity," protection against the disease. If the child is exposed to the germs he will not contract the disease if proper immunity has been given.

The injections are safe and no mother should be alarmed about this procedure. The treatment is given in three injections at weekly intervals. The first may receive it as early as the ninth month.

I cannot over-emphasize the importance, the real necessity of taking the inoculations for protection against diphtheria. The decrease in the number of children who receive the immunization treatment may be attributed to the present economic situation. But this is no excuse. If your child has not been immunized against diphtheria, consult with your physician or the local board of health, for direction to a free clinic.

Your co-operation in this vital public health problem is urgent. Protect your children and your neighbors' children before it is too late.

Ten Classes Of Projects Filed

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Steps to expedite translation of Ohio's public works program, presented by the administration of Governor George White, into action by the federal government were taken this week. Urging adoption of the complete plan, which contemplates expenditure of some $113,000,000 by the federal government in Ohio, Senator Robert J. Bulkley and Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, representing Governor White, were encouraged by the sympathetic attitude of the Roosevelt administration.

Ten classes of projects, which it was estimated would provide work for half of Ohio's 235,000 citizens who now are receiving public relief, are included in the state's program. They are:

Flood control and water conservation, including the Muskingum valley flood prevention project; harbor improvements and shore line protection, including Lake Erie and the Ohio River; reforestation; construction of bridges, streets and roads; National Guard improvements, including extensive work at Camp Perry; airport construction and development; county sanitation, including towns and villages under 2500 population; water works, sewers and sewer systems for towns of more than 2,500 population; public welfare buildings and improvements, mainly those of state, county and city institutions; intrastate reallocation of population, confined principally to 23 counties which have practically exhausted their natural resources in timber, oil, gas, coal and soil.

Working closely with Senator Bulkley to incorporate the Ohio projects in President Franklin D. Roosevelt's two billion dollar public works program, is W. A. Julian, Democratic national committee man from Ohio. Julian also has presented to the president proposals for decentralizing industry and placing unemployed men on small land tracts where they would be self sustaining.

He recommended to the president that $500,000,000 be made immediately available to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for purchase in Ohio and other states of land to be used for small home construction. By acquiring such land and building homes near cities it would make possible the establishment of families of industrial workers on tracts which would provide food crops sufficient for home consumption.

As Ohio leaders pressed their plans to provide jobs for needy industrial and farm workers, applicants for political jobs to be allotted to Ohio by the Roosevelt administration pressed for action on their candidates. Word came to Senator Bulkley and Committee man Julian that for the present the administration would continue to center its attention on such major problems as monetary readjustment and farm relief and let action on most of the appointments wait until the congressional program was completed.

When the time for patronage distribution arrives, Senator Bulkley, Democratic congressman and Henry G. Brunner, chairman of the Democratic state executive committee, will confer with Postmaster General James A. Farley. In selecting candidates to be recommended, first consideration will be given to qualified applicants who have the endorsement of their county committees.

Farm price of corn in Ohio is nearly twice as high as in the surplus state of Iowa; and the farm price of potatoes is 2½ times as high as in Idaho.

ASHVILLE SCHOOL NOTES

Chester Rockey, Jr., and George Wharton of the eighth grade, attended the Boy Scout Circus in Columbus Friday and Saturday. Seventeen of the eighth grade pupils were neither absent nor tardy during the past school month. We hope that our last month of school will be the best in attendance.

In the fifth grade the following had an average of "G" or better: Betty Brobeck, Charlotte Courtwright, Charlotte Dunnick, Dorothy Hinkle, Thelma Ray, and Florence Smith.

The following poem was written by Kenneth Rathbun of the sixth grade and was considered by the class to be one of his best.

"THE MEADOW LARK"
"I hear a meadow lark singing,
Thru the window of our room;
I think he is trying to tell us
That the flowers are in bloom."

This bird lives out in the meadow where the grass grows all around. It feeds upon the insects. And builds its nest on the ground.

It is a noted song-bird. And it is a beauty, too. I wouldn't kill this little bird. For all the world—would you?"

The following seventh grade students made high scores in the Columbian Achievement Test in April: History and Civics—Ira Martin; English—Jane Alexander. Maxene Carter will represent Ashville H. S. in the Oratorical

NEWS OF HOMES AND HOME FOLKS

VOL. 4. NO. 17 Published by STEVENSON'S Tuesday, April 25, 1933

The other day, while H. G. was demonstrating PERFECTION oil-burning stoves and ranges to a prospect, a lady—unknown to us—dropped in and "testified" that she had a PERFECTION and that she had foolishly disposed of it and purchased another make from a certain mail-order house. She further stated that her daughter was going to buy a new oil stove and that she intended to purchase a PERFECTION.

Boy, oh boy, but it sounds good to hear such words coming from a disinterested user! Those few words are worth far more than a salesman can speak. They were words of experience from a user, giving advice to a prospective buyer.

Lady, we thank you. With kerosene oil at only 9c's per gallon, oil cooking is very cheap. Better invest NOW in a PERFECTION and be comfortable and satisfied this summer. Prices are low—a three burner cooker as low at $17.50.

A farmer down in Pickaway-twp will be showing up late at work these mornings. The reason? We delivered him a new bed, spring and mattress. Working men need good beds. How can they expect to do a good job of work unless they get a good night's rest? To get a good rest, the body needs a spring that will adjust itself to the human body. In too many cases, the body must adjust itself to the spring. How's your spring? Does it shape itself quickly and easily to fit your body? Better look into it. Perhaps you'd get more rest with the proper spring under you.

We hear a lot of complaining about the size of gas bills. It's no wonder folks grunt about them! If they only knew it, it's largely their own fault. Look at their old gas ranges! They're regular "gas-eaters"—boosters for the gas company. How's the burners on YOUR range? Are they some three inches from the bottom of your cooking vessels? Is the oven on your range INSULATED? Does it have a heat-control for the oven? If it doesn't have these improvements, it's no wonder your gas bills are high. The Birkhead family on E. Union-st recently had a new type range installed in their kitchen. Results: Gas bills cut about 25 per cent. You can have all of the latest gas-saving improvements mentioned above, as well as gleaming ivory enamel all over the outside, with fresh-air fully enameled on the inside for only $53.25. AND IT'S AN ESTATE, TOO! Only a limited number to be sold at this price. If you want to save gas, buy now before prices advance.

Mrs. Hogan: "Are yez on callin' terms with your neighbor?"

Mrs. Murphy: "O! am that. She called me a thafe and oil called her another."

The president of a large carpet and rug mill says that prices advancing on raw materials will be reflected in their goods. Isn't that a good reason why you should trot down to 148 W. Main-st and select a new rug to replace that one that is all threadbare? We're proud of the quality, designs, and prices of our rugs! Better do that little thing NOW, while you are house-cleaning, and give your furniture a new back-ground.

And for goodness sake, don't forget to give those sweet peas and taller growing plants something on which to grow. A trellis!

they've just got to be right

Each and every Chesterfield!

Each tray of CHESTERFIELDS from the cigarette-making machines passes under the watchful eyes of inspectors, trained by long practice to see flaws such as an end of torn paper, or a poorly filled cigarette.

And there's still another safeguard ... two "electric detectives" on each packaging machine. Electric fingers "feel" each end of every cigarette, and throw out every imperfect package.

Open your pack of Chesterfields, and look at them. It's no accident that every cigarette is round, firm and full. Somebody's been on the job every minute to give you what you want ... a cigarette that's made right in every way and that's milder and tastes better.

they Satisfy

Wherever you buy Chesterfields, you get them just as fresh as if you came by our factory door.

End-on, this tray-full of fresh-made Chesterfields looks like a huge honeycomb. Inspectors, expert from long practice, remove with tweezers each torn or imperfect cigarette.
